The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103 over Wasastjerna (WO 95/27401) alone or if necessary in view of Spencer (WO93/19626).

Spencer and Wasastjerna were cited as an X references in an international search report. Wasastjerna discloses continuously treating cooking oil with an inert gas, like nitrogen, while deep-frying at 356F (180C). The claims appear to differ from Wasastjerna in the recitation of the presence of food residue in the oil. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to expect the meat material of Wasastjerna to introduce food residue into the frying oil during cooking as a result of breakage of the meat product during removal of the food from the frying oil. It is appreciated that sparging or the use of a membrane are not mentioned but no unobvious or unexpected result are seen among various inert gas application modes and applicant has not indicated any criticality in the use of one method over another. Although displacement or removal of degradation products and oxygen is not mentioned, it was clear from final improved oil that these reactants were removed from the oil. Further applicant did not objectively measure any removal of degradation products in his specification. So no difference can be seen from the removal in the reference and the removal in the present application. No unobvious or unexpected difference is seen from the color of applicant's oil and the color of the referenced oil. The process steps appear to be similar so the oil color would be expected to be similar. It is appreciated that all of the inert gases of claim 4 are not mentioned but inert gases are well known for use in oxidizing oils and Spencer is relied upon to support this assertion.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The prior art further shows the state of the art relating to frying oils and inert gases.
